I am a professional writer and brand strategist and have commissioned or supplied content to numerous websites, working with a great many different web builders. This time, the project was much closer to home, as Apis/Bermondsey Street Bees is a business I run with my husband.

Edward was highly recommended to me and, in turn, I am very happy to recommend him to others. He made our collaboration easy and straightforward, listening to what we wanted and providing quick and resourceful solutions where needed. He was a pleasure to work with from first concept to the point where he delivered, on time, a good looking and highly functional website.
